The Economic Crisis and Its Effect on Insurance Regulation

The Katie School Symposium is a unique forum providing opportunity for industry experts, consulting firms, and academics to discuss a related issue from different perspectives. This year's topic is The Economic Crisis and Its Effect on Insurance Regulation.

Following the recent economic turmoil, calls have been made to reform the financial services industry to address the systemic risk that it creates in both our economy and that of the entire world. But how will these reforms affect insurers?

Following the bailout, some insurers are now under federal oversight. To what extent will this federal oversight be extended to all insurers? How will these reforms affect insurance consumers? Are there non-regulatory solutions to this crisis that the industry and regulators should be considering?

These questions and many others will be addressed by this year's presenters at the 8th Annual Katie School Symposium.
